

What is a Mentor?

Being a Mentor is about more than just opening your home to someone in need—it's about opening your heart and your life. When you take in and care for an adult with intellectual and developmental disabilities, you're giving them something money can't buy—a helping hand, a home, a family, and someone who wants to share a life with them.

As a Mentor, you show through your actions that we all matter and we all deserve to live life to the fullest.

So who can be a Mentor?

Just about anyone. You don't need to be a superhero—just a regular person who's ready to bring someone into your home and help give them a better life by sharing yours. It doesn't matter if you're a retiree looking for a way to continue contributing to society, a stay-at-home mom looking to earn money at home, or a working family with children of your own. There's no magic formula—you just have to be you. We'll be with you every step of the way. And you'll become part of a network of people across California who are changing lives and making a difference at home.

The Rewards of Being a Mentor

As a Mentor, you'll earn a reward that can't be measured in dollars—and money to help make ends meet. Mentors are more than just care providers. They are advocates, teachers, friends and family to the people they support.

As a Mentor, you'll have opportunities to:

- Make a difference in someone's life
- Earn money to help make ends meet
- Receive ongoing skill development and education
- Be part of a network of people making a difference at home

California MENTOR's Family Home Agency Program

At California MENTOR we're building relationships and family connections through our Family Home Agency programs. As the largest and most experienced Family Home Agency, serving the entire Golden State, we partner with Regional Centers and nurturing caregivers in the community who we call "Mentors" to give Californians with intellectual and developmental disabilities the services and supports they need in place they can truly call home.

We're with you every step of the way

At California MENTOR you're never alone. Ask any Mentor who they rely on most, and you'll probably hear, "My coordinator!" Our coordinators and clinical staff are available 24/7 to ensure that you have the support you need—every step of the way.

Each home is assigned a coordinator who provides case management services. Our coordinators are human services professionals responsible for overseeing the day-to-day success of an individual's home. The coordinator ensures that the individual's needs are being met in the home and that their plan of care is being followed. They will visit the individual and the Mentor in the home regularly. There is also an after-hours coordinator on call 24/7 to respond to any urgent matters that arise outside of office hours.
